

From TCVESSA's President by Julie Roberts

This time of year always brings out the longing in me. The longing for spring, warmer weather, green grass and, well, you get the picture! With the melting snow, my dogs will miss their daily run on the frozen creek behind our house. I can't tell you how many times we have come upon the turkey convention that seems to congregate back there, or the pheasants or other assorted furry critters. It's funny to watch a group of dogs chase the turkeys, bound and determined to catch them, which of course they never do. But I will admit it is a joy to watch them as they have such a good time and love going for their walks. However obnoxious they are if they see me getting my coat on just to clean the kennel!

TCVESSA has much in store this spring. Our annual awards banquet is in a week, Pet Expo has probably come and gone when you get this, and finally our specialty shows in May. We have changed locations again this year do to not being able to rent the back half of the building where we were last year. We have the privilege of renting this beautiful, spacious facility in Ham Lake. It will come with a little extra care in regards to their special agility flooring, but the extra work will be worth it in the end to have so much room and such a great location and a wonderful surface to run on. Patience and understanding will be needed by everyone.

Finally, TCVESSA would like to extend our sympathy and condolences to B.A. Breese and family on the passing of her husband, Jack. B.A. has been the treasurer of TCVESSA for the past couple of years, a member for several years, as well as a beloved and very hard worker of TCVESSA.

Take care, and until next time throw your dog a bone or a dumbbell!

Julie

“Ring Ready” Grooming Tips by Sarah Kraft

It always boosts my confidence walking into the show ring knowing my dogs coat is at its best. If you've been diligent about your pre-show grooming and bathing, your ring-ready grooming should be pretty straight-forward.

You will need to allow about 1 to 1.5 hours for prepping your dog – depending on how much coat you are dealing with, how many dogs you need to get ready, etc. For the very best results, I recommend doing a full bucket-bath on the grooming table. For this you will need:

- A medium sized bucket or dish pan
- Self-rinsing shampoo (I like Show Off and #1 All Systems)
- 1 tsp. to 1 Tbsp. light anti-static conditioner (Vellus, Coat Handler, or Crown Royale are nice)
- A sponge

I mix both the self-rinse and the conditioner into the bucket, or you can use separate buckets for each if you prefer. Some dogs coats are very sensitive to the amount of product used, and will become stringy very quickly. If your dog has a tendency to do this, use less conditioner in the water. This may require some experimentation ... Also remember, dogs coats are affected by weather the same way our hair is. If it is very dry out, it may take more conditioner to combat static – if humid, the coat may feel gunky quicker.

Using the self-rinse/conditioner mixture, thoroughly bathe all of your dogs furnishings including the ears. I try to start at the front and work back to the rear of the dog so that you aren't creating dirty water to wash the chest and ears with by washing out sticky pants on girls, or “pee” areas on the boys.

Once the dog is bathed, use a towel to SQUEEZE excess water out of the coat. Never use the towel to rub the featherings dry as this will break and damage the coat.

You can use either a high velocity dryer like a Metro or K-9, or a hand dryer to blow out the coat. I prefer starting with a high velocity dryer, as it quickly dries the legs and feet, as well as being warm air which is less damaging than a hot dryer. Completely dry one area at a time – especially if your dog has a wavy or curly coat. Dampness will only encourage curl! You can leave the short hair on the legs slightly damp if you are using chalk, but the coat should appear dry – and only be slightly damp to the touch. As you are drying it is a good idea to use a spray on leave-in conditioner such as Plush Puppy Blow Dry Crème, Isle of Dogs Strengthening Spray, or Crown Royale Magic Touch to prevent any damage from heat or brushing and to help eliminate static. I recommend using either a pin brush or Mason Pearson to blow the featherings straight.

Once your dog is completely dry, you can add chalk to the short coat on the legs for added body, or if you have a bitch that is out of coat, mousse or hairspray is a good way to improve the look bone in the legs. Be sure to use a product that has a natural feel so that you have a touchable dog. It is very undesirable to have a sticky, hard feeling coat. Be sure to completely brush out the chalk, and to brush through the mousse or hairspray. I like to use a small slicker brush for this as it separates the coat really well. Brush the hair up, against the grain, to get the most body in the short coat of the legs and hocks. This is also the best time to put the finishing touches on the hocks if needed.

Make sure the ears are bone dry if you are wrapping them with vet wrap – they will kink and dent otherwise; and don’t wrap them too tight. Keep a finger in the vet wrap next to the ear leather at all times to ensure you don’t inadvertently cut off the circulation in the ear.

A little bit of mousse or bodifier in the topline can be helpful if you have a dog that has dippy areas. Blow dry against the lay of the coat and then comb into place. Less is usually better – you don’t want to create a spike in place of a dip! This is especially true if you are going to a 3 or more day show. Usually by the third day, all you need is a spritz of water blow dried into the coat to revive the mousse.

Right before you head up to the ring, do a light spray of conditioner and lightly blow and brush out the coat. Stick with a pin brush if it is really static-y. A light polishing brush to the top coat can give the final bloom to the coat.

Good luck at the next shows!

—Sarah

Truncervical Insemination (TCI) by Heidi Buytaert, DVM

The goal of breeding is puppies! The bitch's reproductive cycle is one of the most complicated (and exciting) one out there. The number one cause for infertility in the bitch is poor timing. But if the timing is correct there are several techniques that can be used to increase conception rates.

Natural breedings with a proven stud dog and correct timing give the highest conception rate and litter size. However, natural matings are not always feasible. Artificial inseminations (AI) are used in cases where distance is cumbersome, a tie is not possible due to anatomic or behavioral reasons or frozen semen is to be used. Traditional AI is performed and semen is placed in the vagina in hopes that it will travel to the uterus. If the semen is of good quality there are decent conception rates with this technique all other things being equal. However, in some cases the semen may be of poor quality due to stud dog factor, shipping or manipulation of the semen as in the case of frozen. In these cases, techniques can be used that deposit semen directly into the uterus to increase our chances of conception.

Two techniques that can be used to increase the conception rate by depositing semen directly in the uterus are a surgical insemination or a transcervical insemination. In the case of a surgical insemination, an abdominal incision is made the uterine horns are exteriorized. Semen is then injected into each horn, the uterus replaced in the abdomen and the incision line sutured. The technique is not particularly complicated and much less difficult than performing a spay, so a technique that most veterinarians can master. However, some will say that ethically you are performing an elective surgery that may not be necessary. I am not in a position to make this judgment but I will say that medically avoiding a surgery is avoiding a surgery. While our current understanding of anesthesia makes most surgeries safe, there is always a chance for complications either during or after surgery.

A transcervical insemination (TCI) technique was developed in the last few years where a trained veterinarian with the proper equipment can actually use a scoped with a working channel that can be passed through the cervix and allow insemination directly into the uterus without surgery or even anesthesia. The components of the vagina, cervix and uterus are easy to visualize for any competent veterinarian. However, the techniques does have a bit of a learning curve, as the actual passing of the catheter through the cervix requires some skill (somewhat like playing a video game!). Recently, a company called Minitube has developed add-on equipment that greatly helps in the process and I suspect that other companies will follow suit and make the whole process more user friendly in

One of the major advantages of the TCI is that there is no surgery required. The bitch is standing and awake for the whole technique. The bitch that is in standing heat will tolerate the scope very well and in very few instances will any sedation or more than mild restraint be necessary. Another advantage to the TCI is that the veterinarian will view the vagina, cervix and uterus during the process and can gain further valuable information about the bitch's heat cycle. The information can be used along with other timing information already collected to help time the bitch more accurately. But quite possibly the biggest benefit to performing the TCI is that the procedure can be performed several times to cover a longer range of the fertile period. Your timing with TCI doesn't have to be quite as perfect as the surgical insemination where you only get one shot.

Some people will claim that the surgical procedure is just better. I am not so convinced and the current date shows that they probably have equally successful conception rates. Intuitively, it seems that placing semen in the uterus is placing semen in the uterus! The fact that TCI is non-invasive and can be used several times in the fertile period should make it the technique of the future.

Aspen was not only my best friend but my constant companion since the day I picked him up at 9 weeks old.

Aspen was my heart dog; there will never be another like him for me in my lifetime. He did everything I asked of him and more. He really didn’t like Obedience, loved doing Agility his own way, did Rally because I asked him to. His true love was Hunting, now that he LOVED, followed by his Therapy work. He didn’t do great at any one performance venue, but he tried, for me.

He had a large following @ The Pines Assisted Living Community in Richfield. He spent over 450 hours this year on Therapy Visits.

He is following his Grandma Dolly to the Rainbow Bridge. He was with Dolly @ her bedside for the last 9 months. We lost Dolly on January 2nd, just 17 days before Aspen.

Please, everybody, give your dogs a hug from Aspen; you never know if it will be the last. Rest well my baby boy.....

We will miss you, Mister Manners—

January 26, 2010

I said good-bye to my best friend today. My buddy, who I'm quite sure loved me more than anybody, dog or human ever could. I'm fortunate in that he lived to be 13 1/2 with no medical problems in his lifetime, except for when he bloated 3 years ago. I'm so lucky to have been home when that happened, thus saving his life.

So on Tuesday morning, just like we have done thousands of times, we went for our 2-mile walk, his body slowed by age and atrophy. We walked past a woman working in her yard, and as I've heard so many times before, she said, "beautiful dog". I wanted to turn to her and say "you should have seen him in his prime, he was magnificent", but I didn't, I knew I would not be able to get the words out without breaking down.

Julie put his first specialty major on him at 7 mos. old in San Antonio, I finished the rest of the points, getting his last major one Halloween in Tulsa, OK.

He was my first true agility dog. He was the 2nd recipient of the TCVESSA's Agility Dog of the Year award. - Although speed not being his forte', we did pretty well as a team.

No one was more surprised than me when he achieved his AX in three consecutive runs. Running at a trial one time, he and I were in the middle of the course when suddenly he took off running for the fence that separated us from the audience. He stood at the fence, pawing at it so pathetically, the crowd laughing and awing. I looked past the fence and there on the other side, was Ginger H. with her b/w Springer girl, Shelly.

Rainbow Bridge

Somehow he had spotted her while we were running and decided he needed to go over and get a better look at her and maybe fall in love. Afterwards I asked Ginger if she would not have Shelly ringside when it was our turn to run tomorrow. Next day, we took off to run our course, doing pretty well, then suddenly at the top of the A-frame, he stopped and stood there gazing around the arena, oh my gosh, he's looking for Shelly. What better place to look for her than at the top of the A-frame.

I think what I will miss most, his ever-vibrating tail, his wonderful singing to the Hungry Puppy song, and his always, always having a kiss for me. When you see Lucy, give her a smooch and I will see you guys again sometime.

TCVESSA Lifetime Members

Congratulations are in order to several TCVESSA members for achieving lifetime membership status. Recognition is given to Elaine Bergquist, Barb and Jerry Ciresi, Francie Nelson, Frances Nelson, and Brion and Julie Roberts.

Thank you for your ongoing support of TCVESSA!

Time to Renew Your Membership

It's that time again—TCVESSA membership renewal, that is. The renewal form can be found on the TCVESSA website (www.tcveffa.org), and it is also included in this newsletter. It is not stapled to the newsletter, so you can more easily complete it and return it to Mary Dahl, our Membership Secretary. Renewing your membership also gives us the opportunity to update your contact information.

Membership renewal is due by April 1.

A Note from B.A. Breese

Thank you to all my Springer friends who sent words of hope, cards of condolences, and contributions to Jack's special arts interest. My husband of 36 years is now gone from my side, but never from my heart.

Again with sincere thanks, B.A. Breese.
